

Allowing more mega-corporations to own more media outlets will just reduce the quality of the programming and reduce competition. It will empower a small group of people who will have the ability to control what we see and what we think. It is neither good for society's entertainment nor for democracy.